FREW & CAMPBELL, STERS AND PROPRIETORS.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 14.

THE Cincinnati Commercial of January 8 printed a fac simile of the handwriting of Gen. Jackson while President. It is in the form of a memorandum-note to Amos Kendall, defining Jackson's views of the rights of States. It reads:

Nullfication is revolution—and if a State attempts to nullify the laws of the United States by force, it is rebellion, and of the possesses the physical power to re-sist successfully, then she has the right to establish her own government, and if the balance of the States have the physical balance of the States have the power, they have a perfect right under this confederation of perpetual & perfect Union, to coerce her to obedience. For a State to the Union peaceably she must consent of that number of the obtain the consent of that number of the States which the Constitution gives the power to alter, & amend it. The people being the fountain of all sovereign power have a right to alter & change their government; and the confederated & perpetual union formed by themselves, upon which the more perfect union, the constitution of the united states, is based, provides how it can be altered or dissolved—any other mode to alter it is, rerolution, & worr.

It will be noted that this from Old Hickory is significant,-the clearest statement that has been made of his views of the rights of States, and reads like prophecy. The original MS, is in the ession of the Ohio Historical Society.

The Sheep Boom in West Virginia. Hon. Ruben Davisson brought into this county last week over three hundred head of fine wool sheep, which he had purchased in Pennsylvania and let to the farmers on the "share plan."— Barbour County Plaindeuter.

The above is one of several such items appearing lately in our interior West Virginia exchanges. They show that the interest in wool growing in this State is taking decided hold upon the farmers, and that in the course of the next year or two the amount of sheep and wool grown in West Virginia will be heavily increased. For the first time apparently in the history of the State the idea is abroad among farmers that our soil and climate are jus as well adapted to sheep culture as that of Pennsylvania, or of the l'anhandle here, or country like West Virginia, where grain by culture, an industry that will combine, ligent agriculturists. The experience of the farmers in this part of the State, and of farmers in this part of the State, and of our Pennsylvania and Ohio neighbors, is that, taken one year with another, no mode of farming pays as well as sheep culture. It saves not only the land (and enriches it), but it saves also a great deal of the hard and rough work attendant on active cultivation of the soil, in the way of plowing, sowing and barvesting. Not that we mean that plowing and sowing should be given up on our farms, for that is not the practice in this region, but simply that it should be made subordinate and tributary to the grazing of sheep. West Virginia is able to raise her own West Virginia is able to raise her own breadstuffs, and the doing so will only involve a judicious alternation of the soil where sheep culture is the main object in

The fact that land is cheap in West Vir ginia, and taxes very moderate, should give the sheep business pre-eminence on our soil as compared with the highe priced lands of this immediate locality. If we could turn the agriculture of the State mainly into wool growing, mutton breeding and the dairy business, we should add largely to the exportable product of the State, and to the value of the soil, and make money easier than it is generally made by the farming in vogue at this

We have by telegraph this morning the comments of the Mark Lane Express on the status of the wheat market in England, by which it appears that buyers on that side are hesitating about going in and solving the problem connected with the modulation now in progress in this country. Bad as have been the English (and whole European) harvests, and bad as the weather has been for getting in their crops for another year, yet it would seem that they cannot, as yet, work themselves up to the views entertained of their ultimate necessities by the great syndicate speculation on this side of the Atlantic. It is not improbable, however, that the European buyers will have to yield their conservative views, and raise the present upprecedented grain blockade in this country. As showing the extent and character of this immense blockade, we append the following New York dispatch in regard to it:

In regard to it:

New York, January 12.—The great corner in grain was the one topic to-day in the Produce Exchange. All sorts of rumors were flying around of organized attempts to make a raid upon the Syndicate and break the corner. It was said that they had purchased every bushel of grain in Chicago, and that warehouses and elevators were running over. In this city the store-houses and elevators and elevators are full to overflowing, and there is not an empty canal-hoat. Some weeks back the Syndicate had quietly engaged every canal-boat that was empty, or likely to become empty, at the rate of So per day, to receive grain on storage. In addition, they are saving storage on over (0,00,000 bushels of wheat in store-houses at the rate of one-half cent a on over 0,000,000 business of wheat in store-houses at the rate of one-half cent a bushel per week. They have altogether nearly 10,000,000 bushels of grain in this city and in Chicago, and on the railroads about 17,000,000 bushels more. A large operator in grain said to-day that a prominent railroad man had assured

A large operator in grain said to-day that a prominent railroad man had assured him that the Company which he represented intended to build an extra building for the storage of grain in Chicago, and that unless the deadlock in the market was broken this week they would undoubted by have an army of mechanics to work constructing the new grain depot. He also stated that his railroad would use its rolling-stock to its fullest capacity to bring grain from the West to New York; and it he Syndicate maintained the present high price of grain, they would have to purchase three million bushels of grain per week for several weeks, and then have no place to store it.

The very decided increase in building in the city, to which we called attention last spring was maintained throughout the the Ohio side of the river. In a hilly year just closed. Though a number of structures of which plans were filed with growing is expensive, and where the soil the Superintendent of Buildings was es rapidly washed and impoverished about 700 less than in 1871,-a year of exceptional activity in this direction,-it fa as sheep culture does, to make the hill exceeded the total of any year from that land available, and at the same time keep it time until 1879. The number of buildings enriched, must commend itself to all intel- proposed to be put up last year was 2,005, of an estimated cost of $22,567,312, against 1,672 in 1878, of an estimated cost of for single families. Yet good and light apartments, notwithstanding the great in-crease in the number of French flats, can-not even now be obtained at prices which suit the purses of families of small means.

The prospects of a renewed and increased activity in building in the spring are very neouraging.

The architects report that there will be The architects report that there will be an unusual number of important and extensive alterations in business buildings down town next spring. These additions will generally consist of further stories, and such alterations will render necessary the putting-in of elevators, which now have become requisite in lotty buildings used for offices. The improvement in business is creating a demand for offices at lair rents, and landlords find it to their profit to modify their buildings to attract tenants, who now are indisposed to climb many stairs.

By that time the stock of grain on hand in the United Kingdom will be nearly exhausted, and then the Syndicate expect orders in such numbers and of such magnitude that it will take all the grain they have here or that can reach tide water. Therefore, please allow me a short space for this purpose.

While we have the highest admiration of General Grant, and accord to him superlative honors as a military chieftean, we are opposed to placing him in nomination for a third term. General Grant has proven to the world his great military and we are, out here, just as ready to acknowledge it and do him honor as no other people. But we are not willing to sacrifice the interests of the purty to graifly Grant or those who seek to force him on the convention. It does not follow that a great military man must need be a great statesman. History is replete with illustrations of the truth, that ability to perform any required use in a successful way is, or at least should be, the true he at great statesman. History is replete with illustrations of the ruth, that ability to perform any required use in a successful way is, or at least should be, the true of the man to whom it is entroused. It seems to us that we as a "nation" have too much interest at stake to ingrore this historical fact.

Were we called to choose a military leader, we would certainly say grant us Grant, but were we going to select a candidate for the presidency, we would choose a score befors we would contex to him. Washburne, Sherman or Blaine would unite all the Republican forces out here better on the State. The Camerons do not own the Republican party in Ohio.

As for ourself, I would prefer Grant on the person of t peer and slices of brown bread and butte covered with a piece of smoked salmon or
